Hope Valley aged care home joins Eldercare

Yesterday Eldercare officially became the new owner of the north eastern suburbs residential care facility formerly known as Ananda Hope Valley.

Eldercare Chief Executive Jane Pickering said this is an ‘exciting opportunity’ for Eldercare to have a presence in the northeast of Adelaide and offer its established brand and best practice model of care to the local community.

“Eldercare’s high standards of care and service provision will be applied to the home and as part of this, there will be some system and facility improvements that will benefit residents and their families,” said Jane.

The home will now be known as Eldercare Hope Valley.

Jane said a significant refurbishment program will commence this week and over the next 12 months the home will be updated and redecorated.

“A gym will be built for resident use, and a more spacious and fit for purpose hairdressing salon and resident lounge and dining areas will be created,” said Jane.

“The current large memory support unit will be reconfigured into two smaller units to allow staff to provide high quality care.”
